Sustainable Agriculture for Rural and Regional Growth
Free e-learning course in three languages

The European programme on “Innovative Practices in Biotourism – Prespa & Korca” is offering an e-learning course on “Sustainable Agriculture for Rural and Regional Growth” in 3 different languages (English, Greek and Albanian) completely free of charge.

The course is aimed at students, professionals and entrepreneurs seeking opportunities in tourism which support the environment and culture and provide new choices for economic growth. The course is approximately one month in duration, and a Certificate of Completion will be issued to participants who successfully complete the coursework. Course is tailored to suit a flexible study pace and provide information, self-test material and examples from the Prespa–Korca cross-border region. Theme and timetable is shown below.

Sustainable Agriculture for Rural and Regional Growth

Course begins November 11, 2013 – Course ends December 15, 2013

Rural development constitutes a significant element of any active developmental policy, as the strengthening of rural areas contributes to a more viable society. The course promotes the multifunctional role of agriculture, and presents initiatives for improving competitiveness, securing environmental resources, diversifying economic activity, and conserving rural heritage which are fundamental priorities in rural development policy.
